Encouragement from BYU and ASBYU officials led to the early sale of card stunt tickets Tuesday morning, leaving those who failed to get tickets angered and disappointed.

The card stunt tickets were scheduled to go on sale at 8 p.m. Tuesday but were sold shortly after midnight Tuesday morning when 730 people were assembled.

Students rushed en masse to the Marriott Center Monday night when word got out the tickets would go on sale as soon as 730 people were assembled. Many of the students came from the dance at University Villa where at about 10:45 p.m. it was announced that the tickets were to go on sale.

"I'm just steamed," said Barry Shelley, an evening student from Mesa, Ariz. "I didn't even get a chance at them (the tickets)."

When pressed about the incident, Alan Knight, ASBYU athletics vice president, said he arrived at the Marriott Center about 10:30 p.m. to find students pouring out to find others to fill the necessary 730 seats. He said he didn't try to stop them because, "by then people were going and coming back with others."

Knight failed to mention a meeting about two weeks ago between himself, Scott Williams (BYU administrator in charge of ticket sales), Jim Kimmel (ASBYU Activities adviser) and ASBYU President

The tickets were sold before most students even knew they had been available.

Jeff Duke. At that time, by Kimmel's admission, it was decided that the tickets would be sold as soon as 730 people were assembled.

Kimmel said requiring students to wait in lines was "a waste of humanity."

Seat counts at about 9 p.m. and 10 p.m. to determine the number of people there apparently led to students asking if the tickets would go on sale when enough people were assembled.

"Go get your friends," the students were told at about 10:10-10:30 p.m. At that time, reportedly only about 80-100 people were waiting. They were told that another seat count would be made at midnight and if the 730 seats were filled, the tickets would go on sale.

Because some of those in the seats were non-students, and because some individuals were in line just to accompany others, about 50 tickets were left unsold. Knight said they will be sold on a game-to-game basis.

Many students were not expecting the card stunt tickets to go on sale until today. A story in The Daily Universe orientation issue Aug. 28 said the tickets would be sold Sept. 3 and the time and place would be announced Sept. 3 (today) in The Daily Universe.

However, Knight said after the interview with The Daily Universe writer he decided to change the date to Tuesday "to eliminate the Tuesday overnight line" and to allow the card-stunt tickets to be sold at a different time than the season tickets.

Polish workers idle

Coal miners stay on strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Workers said 50,000 Silesian coal miners remained on strike Tuesday despite statements by the communist government that it would meet the strikers' demands in an effort to end Poland's labor crisis.

In Katowice, center of Poland's vital mining and industrial region about 160 miles southwest of Warsaw, workers said 17 mines had been closed by strikes, idling some 50,000 miners and a number of workers in related industries.

Warsaw Radio reported that a government commission under Deputy Premier Aleksander Kocpek had found the demands of miners at 10 coal pits to be "acceptable in their entirety," and that it was "ready to sign an agreement" with the joint strike committee.

But hours after the announcement, there was no indication that a signing was near. A spokesman for the government information service Interpress would say only that negotiations might continue "for hours."

There was no official explanation for the delay, but a dissident source in Katowice said Tuesday afternoon that the issues were not completely resolved.

The afternoon Warsaw newspaper Express Wieczorny said other plants dependent on coal "and several not connected with the coal mines are still on strike" in the mining region. The paper repeated previous government reports that a final agreement was near.

Most of Poland's other strikers returned to work Monday after pushing the country to its worst crisis in a decade and winning concessions unprecedented in the Soviet bloc. Strikers, with their power center in the Baltic port of Gdansk, forced the communist leadership of Edward Giersek to grant them independent trade unions, the right to strike and release of jailed political dissidents.

The 18-day-old strike by some 600,000 workers in more than 20 cities also led to a sweeping government shakeup. Silesia is Giersek's power base and has about 325,000 workers mining coal, Poland's major export for earning foreign currency. A protracted battle in the mining heartland would be another blow to Poland's economy, to Giersek's political future and could also unravel the government's settlement with port workers.

In Moscow, articles Tuesday in the Communist Party daily Pravda and the government newspaper Izvestia made clear that the Kremlin was still angry and concerned about the situation in Poland. The articles warned that "anti-socialist elements" were "threatening Poland's future."

Russian immigrants find happiness in Utah Valley

By CHUCK KOFOED
Universe Staff Writer

Change would be the word to describe the life of German Gerdjeich Sinitzin and his family during the past 10 months. If a few more words were allowed, they probably would be freedom, blessings and happiness.

On Oct. 28, 1979, German Sinitzin and his family won a year-long battle for permission to permanently leave the Soviet Union, which had become a "stepmother" of a homeland to the family.

On May 10, German, his wife Victoria and 9-year-old daughter Anastasia joined the LDS Church in Austria. And on Aug. 23, less than two weeks ago, they came to Provo, where Mrs. Sinitzina ("Russian women add an a to their married name," says Sinitzin) will teach a Russian class and be head resident at the women's Russian House. German and his family have felt the pangs of starting life anew in a foreign land and adjusting to the demands of a new religion, but they are people quick to count their blessings.

"It's like a chain of chances. But I don't think it's an accident," says Victoria. "We think it was God's will to send us to the Mormon Church."

The Sinitzins have given the Lord much to work with. German has been a man dedicated to truth and freedom. He has spent much of his life listening to the Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Company, shows which help to give Russians an actual picture of Western living.

He has even risked being imprisoned by reading the works of Russian dissidents, such as Alexander Solzhenitsyn. "You can get five years in prison for even having the Gulag Archipelago. We kept it hidden in the house," he said.

Victoria didn't always share this political activism with her husband. "I was a tour guide for nine years and was very pro-Soviet," she said. "My father taught me that no matter how bad the system is, you must suffer together with your country."

(Ironically, her father had been barred from the Communist Party for extolling the virtues of Western living a bit too loudly after two visits to San Francisco during World War II.)

"When I married German, I began to look at life from the point of a consumer. Also, German was much more politically active. I began to read the books and listen to BBC. These things opened my eyes," Victoria continued.

"I couldn't lie to people anymore; I had to tell the truth. So I changed jobs," she said.

Victoria went to work as a technical translator for the Wilkinson Sword Company. However, it was the contacts she had made as a tour guide — "trying to convert the tourists, to tell them about the advantages of the Soviet system" — which eventually helped the family obtain visas to emigrate.

German had talked about leaving Russia by sneaking out illegally. Afraid for young Anastasia, Victoria told him he would have to go alone.

"If you get arrested, we'll be okay. I can get the bread," she had told him.

Eventually, they decided to make it a family affair. They checked out the Jewish way of emigration via relatives already living in Israel. All they needed was an invitation. After clever dealings at the Dutch Embassy, which handled Russian relations with Israel, they obtained their "Jewish uncle."

But Russian visa officials, wise to such tricks, denied them passports. Victoria then wrote a friend from Texas, a former tourist, who had diplomatic contacts in Washington, asking him to contact some high Russian officials to help them emigrate. She also wrote the United Nations Committee on Human Rights.

"Answers to both of my letters came at the same time," she recounted. "Two weeks later the Russian visa office sent us word that we could leave if we stopped writing letters. They also told us that if we didn't stop, we would not be able to leave. Ever!"

On the magic day of Oct. 28, the same date they had been married 12 years earlier, the Sinitzins left Russia.

The family went with three other Russian emigrants to Austria, where they were to find the Mormon Church, via the missionaries. Neither German nor Victoria had had much previous contact with the church.

Victoria heard about Mormons and Salt Lake City through a letter from a "friend of a friend" who had emigrated earlier from Russia and was living in the Utah capital.

"I met hundreds of Americans and some of them were my close friends. But I never heard about Mormons before."

"I thought it (Mormonism) was some kind of religious sect, something American, kooky and weird, with everyone

Iran studies new appeal

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai met with resident Ambassador Bani-Sadr on Tuesday about "important state questions" and was reported studying an appeal by Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie for release of the 52 American hostages.

Muskie sent a letter to Rajai urging the "early and safe release" of the hostages, who on Tuesday spent their 304th day in captivity.

Pars, the official Iranian news agency, said Rajai would respond to Muskie's letter at his "next public interview." There was no indication when the interview would be or that Rajai's answer might be.

Tehran Radio said Rajai's meeting with Bani-Sadr took place on problems concerning the cabinet as well as state questions, but gave no details except to say the meeting was at the president's home. It was a continuation of a Monday night meeting.

Muskie's note was delivered Sunday afternoon by the Swiss Embassy in Tehran, which has represented U.S. interests since President Carter broke diplomatic relations with Iran on April 7.

The Muskie message appeared to be part of a new diplomatic initiative seeking release of the American captives. Three weeks ago, Muskie promised new efforts on behalf of the hostages.

Bani-Sadr's meetings with Rajai apparently focused on the cabinet of hard-liners named by Rajai on Sunday. There have been reports that Bani-Sadr opposes many of the choices. The Majlis, Iran's parliament, was expected to start a debate on the new cabinet later in the week.

Pars reported that an Iraqi aircraft violated Iranian airspace Monday and was driven off by anti-aircraft fire. According to the news agency, the incursion was on the border of West Azerbaijan Province.

There have been numerous reports of alleged Iraqi border violations in recent months.

SDA hit by resignations

By NANCY HARRIS
Assistant News Editor

The Student Development Association, which was involved in a controversy last April over the renomination of all the former officers, announced Friday that three of the four officers have resigned.

SDA president Reed Markham, the only remaining officer, said that all the resignations came as surprises to him, especially after the trouble the officers had getting the positions again.

Bryan Jackson, SDA vice president, has taken a fund raising position with the National Association on Deafness, said Markham. Jackson will be at Northridge University directing fund raising for a new research building for deafness.

"The position Bryan took is a very good one," said Markham. "He's working with a lot of celebrities and making good money."

Lori Sansom, another vice president, has returned to the University of Utah, said Markham. She attended the U before enrolling at BYU last year.

"It was one of the hardest decisions I've ever had to make," said Miss Sansom about her return to the U. "I'm financially better off at the U. I really couldn't afford to come back to BYU."

"I was in charge of recruiting, which could make or break the Telefund. I'll be instructing the new officer on who to contact and involve in Telefund," said Miss Sansom.

The executive secretary, Karen Koning, left her position to go on a cruise to the South Pacific.

"I'll be returning the week before Telefund and we decided that would be cutting it too close for anything but a resignation," said Miss Koning.

The three resigning officers left Markham with the Telefund responsibilities. "This will slow things a little for Telefund," he said. "We've now got to take time to train new people."

Applications for the vacant positions are being taken for the remainder of the week in room 165 Alumni House.

The SDA office handles fund raising for new projects on campus. The biggest drive is Telefund, which will take place Oct. 27-Nov. 8. Students and alumni are contacted during this time and asked for pledges. Up to 1,600 people are involved in the organization of Telefund, Markham said.

One killed, four injured in canyon 'copter crash

A 20-year-old Manti man was killed and four others were seriously injured when a helicopter crashed Tuesday morning in Diamond Fork Canyon east of Spanish Fork, a sheriff's department spokesman reported.

Davy Keisel, 20, died about 10 a.m. from head injuries he suffered when the helicopter he was riding in crashed in a canyon ridge on Uinta National Forest land, authorities said. The helicopter, owned by Skyline Exploration, Inc., "developed a vibration and failure in its stabilizers," a Uinta National Forest spokesman said. Origin of the malfunction was unknown.

The pilot of the craft, Vincent Toriano, 32, of Snyderville, Utah, was killed in fair condition at Utah Valley Hospital in Provo, a hospital spokesman said. The other passengers taken to the hospital included: Eric Bergeson, 33, Des Moines, Iowa, listed in critical condition with lacerations and a collapsed lung; Gray Martinez, 27, Salt Lake City, listed in critical condition with a fractured pelvis; and Cody Hincks, 22, Swan Valley, Idaho, is also listed in critical condition with a broken neck, a hospital spokesman reported.

The helicopter was flying employees of Skyline Exploration, Inc., a seismic research company, to the area to look for gas and oil. A second Skyline helicopter in the area transported the injured men to UVH.

Skyline Exploration company officials refused comment when contacted Tuesday afternoon.

Bergeson was transferred to a Salt Lake City hospital Tuesday afternoon.

Calhoun guilty of murder-one

SALT LAKE CITY — A jury took only an hour and a half Tuesday to convict John Michael Calhoun of first-degree murder in the shooting deaths of O. Thayne and Lorrain Acoed.

Acoed was a prominent businessman and part owner of the Salt Lake Golden Eagles of the Central Hockey League.

The couple was shot to death in their West Valley home during a robbery. Calhoun was also convicted of two counts of aggravated robbery.

The penalty phase of the trial will begin Wednesday. Calhoun will be sentenced to either life in prison or death before a firing squad.

The Acoeds were found tied together in the basement. Each had been shot twice in the head with a .22-caliber rifle. Calhoun testified that he shot the couple, but said it was unintentional.

Prosecutors said everything about the killing was intentional.

During the trial, Larry Scott Webb, 16, testified that he accompanied Calhoun, and that Calhoun tormented the couple before killing them.

He said Calhoun poked Mrs. Acoed with a knife, and threatened to suffocate or drown the couple.

Webb testified that Calhoun told him he had to kill the Acoeds so they wouldn't testify against him about the robbery of their home.

Heart transplants 'poor treatment'

SALFORD, England — Heart transplant operations are a "tragically inappropriate if not obscenely irrelevant" way of dealing with heart disease, a British health expert said Tuesday.

But surgeons who perform such operations said they would continue even though more than half of those patients undergoing transplants have died.

Dr. Peter Draper, head of the Health Policy Study Unit at Guy's Hospital in London, said the 25 heart transplants in Britain in the past 12 years were "insignificant" compared with 160,000 deaths in this country every year from heart disease.

Draper told a scientific conference in this north England town a similar, though less strong, case could be made against much open-heart surgery.

Thirteen of the 25 heart transplant patients have died. Only one, Keith Castle, 53, of London, who received his new heart 13 months ago, has survived longer than a year.

Twenty-one of the British heart transplants have been performed in the past 20 months when programs restarted at two hospitals: Harefield, near London, and Papworth, in Cambridgeshire County.

Two patients, a 16-year-old schoolboy and a 52-year-old surgeon, died within days of each other last week less than four months after such operations.

Reagan searches for labor votes

DETROIT — Ronald Reagan, searching for blue-collar votes in auto plants, says American industry can compete with West German and Japanese factories only with less government regulation and lower taxes.

In a city where imports helped push auto industry unemployment to 18 percent, Reagan said, "I don't think our problem is as much in Japan as in Washington, D.C." He said other governments do not hold "an adversary relationship with their own industry."

Teachers ordered to end strike

Teachers in Rochester, N.Y., were ordered to end their day-old walkout Tuesday, while Philadelphia teachers blocked the city's school administration building as labor disputes intensified in school districts across the nation.

Acting at the request of Rochester school officials, Justice David C. Boehm of the state Supreme Court issued an injunction prohibiting the walkout and set a hearing for Sept. 16.

There was no indication whether the picketing teachers were ready to comply with the order but Elmer Henretta, president of the teachers' union, said, "We have no intention of pulling back until we have a settlement." The dispute has centered on wages.

Classes for Rochester's 34,600 public school pupils are not scheduled to begin until Wednesday, but the 2,300 public school teachers were to report to work Tuesday.

Philadelphia teachers, arms locked and singing solidarity songs, blocked entrances to a school administration building to protest layoffs and a wage freeze that threatens the opening of school for 220,000 students on Friday.

School board attorneys were in Common Pleas Court Tuesday seeking an injunction to limit the number of pickets and to prevent them from keeping 700 non-union workers from entering the administration building.

"Our pickets are solid and we will stand firm until we get a fair contract," said President John Murray of the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers whose 23,000 members struck when the current contract expired Monday.

Anaconda strike talks halted

BUTTE, Mont. — No future bargaining sessions are scheduled between the Anaconda Copper Co. and union representatives in Montana, a spokesman for the company said Monday.

John Calcester said there was no communication Monday between the two sides following a breakdown in bargaining talks Sunday in Spokane, Wash.

Neither side has said what issues led to the impasse.

Mel Peterson, business agent for the Boilermakers Union and chief of the local unions' coordinated strike committee, refused to comment Monday.

The Anaconda Copper workers at the company's mine here, smelter in Anaconda and refinery in Great Falls walked off the job July 1 as part of the nationwide industry strike that has idled about 40,000 workers.

Students recovering from injuries

Two BYU students are recovering from injuries received when an explosion ripped through a train station in Italy Aug. 2.

Jeff and William Davis were participating in a BYU Study Abroad program when they were injured in the blast.

The two are recovering in Vienna. William has been released from the hospital, Study Abroad department officials said.

Department Secretary Evie Forsyth said Jeff is still hospitalized with leg injuries.

"He's doing a lot better than he was," she said, "but he's still running a slight fever and they won't do surgery till the temperature drops."

She said there were no plans to bring Jeff back to the United States for the surgery which must be done to correct leg tissue damage.

Officials said William Davis is well enough to join the rest of the group in Vienna.

Doctors in Vienna haven't said when Jeff will be released, but they say he is alert and conscious and is able to receive some visitors.

First Presidency urges gasoline conservation

In response to a request from President Carter that the church and other large organizations in the United States cooperate in the energy conservation campaign, the First Presidency has suggested to employees at church headquarters in Salt Lake City that they, where possible, join in ride-sharing arrangements or use public transportation.

Church leaders also suggest that employees promote fuel efficiency through careful driving and proper maintenance of vehicles.

Judge orders release of student editor

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A state district judge ordered the editor of the University of Texas student paper released Tuesday less than an hour after he had been sent to jail on a contempt of court charge.

State District Judge Tom Blackwell signed a writ of habeas corpus freeing Mark McKinnon, editor of the Daily Texan, who was booked into Travis County jail Tuesday afternoon, on $1,000 bond.

McKinnon declined comment on his release.

The editor was sentenced to jail and fined $100 by County Court-At-Law Judge Jon Wisser after he refused to hand over negatives of photographs taken during a demonstration by Middle Eastern students on UT's Austin campus.

Saying he had "no great desire" to send McKinnon to jail, Wisser told McKinnon, "I understand you are a man of principle and strong conviction."

McKinnon's arrest came after a hearing Tuesday morning. He left the courtroom with his lawyers after being found guilty, but was arrested when he returned to the courtroom for sentencing.

Wisser said he wanted to see whether the negatives were the same ones sought by prosecutors of 16 Middle Eastern students who allegedly booted and heckled Fereydoon Hoveyda, former Iranian ambassador to the United Nations, during a campus speech.

Wisser said he had no doubt that three envelopes of negatives contained pictures of the Jan. 31 incident, which occurred before McKinnon, a Denver, Colo., senior, was elected editor.

having big beards or something," German interjected. "But they are cleaner than everybody."

Two months after meeting the missionaries, German, Victoria and Anastasia were baptized. Four days later, despite warnings from friends that they would become lost to the church, the Sinitzes left for New York City.

Finding the chapel at Lincoln Square and attending church their first Sunday in the United States, they didn't become lost. But neither did they stay in New York.

Desiring a "good Mormon school" for Anastasia to attend and wanting to avoid high crime rates, the family moved west. After brief stays in Italy Aug. 2 and a small farm outside Spokane, Wash., the family was lured to Provo by the university setting.

Victoria, who completed six years of college in Russia studying art, language and technical fields, has deep intellectual and cultural interests which makes staying away from big cities and universities almost unbearable.

She landed a position on the BYU faculty this semester as a Russian teacher and resident head of the Russian House, which is located across the street from a "good Mormon elementary school."

Although the Sinitzes' future plans are still a bit unsettled — German works for two Knight admitted he was telling people the location of the line Monday morning.

Thus the tickets were sold before most students even knew they had been available.

"The people that are in charge of making the ticket policy equitable are all of a sudden the same people who are making it inequitable," said Ted Lloyd, a graduate student in MBA from Provo. Lloyd said he believed those who run the ticket office were more responsible for the occurrence than the ASBYU Athletics Office was.

Lloyd said it was unfair to give out the tickets early. "Next year they'll come earlier than ever," he said. "They keep yelling every year about the lines, but they foment it."

Harassment continues for Iranians

By JERRY PAINTER
Off-Campus News
Editor

Some of BYU's 27 Iranian students are still being harassed by non-Iranian students, even though pressure from the Immigration and Naturalization Service to deport Iranians has slackened off.

Most of the money problems and anti-Iranian rallies which seemed to accompany Utah Iranian students last winter have ebbed away, according to most foreign student advisers at Utah's colleges, but harassing phone calls and verbal abuse persist.

"The only trouble we are having now is that some of the Iranians are being hassled or feel they are being hassled," a spokesman from BYU's International Students Office said.

The spokesman said some of the students have asked the office not to give out their phone numbers and others have changed their phone numbers. "But still get calls from people harassing them."

Gerald Fasbender, director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service office in Salt Lake City, said as long as Iranian students maintain their visas, the INS will leave them alone. Earlier this year, the INS toured Utah's colleges and interviewed all the Iranian students for visa violations. At that time, Fasbender said any violations would result in deportation.

Fasbender says further actions against Iranian students in the future will probably not be taken.

"I don't think there will be any changes in the present policies," he said. "I haven't heard anything in the wind on it."

Fasbender said the number of Iranian students in the state has "stayed about the same" through the summer.

Lamar Frandsen, foreign student adviser at Utah State, said 53 new Iranian students have transferred to his school for the fall semester, and he said he's concerned.

"With Khomeini telling all the Iranians in America to give us heck, I have to be a little concerned when 53 new Iranian students transfer here," Frandsen said.

He said he expects an increase in total numbers of Iranian students at Utah State because of the large number of transfer students, although he said he wasn't sure how many Iranians had graduated.

Marilyn Owen, an International Student Office counselor at the University of Utah, said Iranian students at the U of U have had some complaints about their treatment from non-Iranians.

"Our students have been keeping a low profile and haven't had much harassment, but some have received it," she said.

The U of U had about 30 of its Iranian students go back to Iran over the summer and will have about 170 Iranians attending in the fall, said Ms. Owen.

Several of the students left because they were unable to obtain funds from home to continue their education, she said.

"Things have improved a lot now," she continued. "They are able to get their funds through their relatives by contacting the Central Bank of Iran. The others went back because they were concerned about their country."

Frandsen said money problems did "cause some headaches" for Utah State Iranian students, too, "but no more than in the past."

Part of the financial problem for Iranian students stems from federal laws prohibiting foreign students from working off-campus without a permit.

During the Iranian student money crunch, BYU helped its Iranians with loans, on-campus jobs and money advances, a spokesman said.

Weber State College officials were unavailable for comment.

Harassment and Reagan trade accusations

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In an election campaign that is heating up rapidly, President Carter accused Ronald Reagan on Tuesday of threatening to trigger a perilous new nuclear arms race, and the Republican nominee blamed Carter for waging a deluge of foreign car attacks.

Reagan's shadow over the debate of the issues— Carter in Independence, Mo., and Reagan in Detroit was a burgeoning, emotionally charged exchange prompted by a Reagan remark Monday about the president's own campaign in the land of the Ku Klux Klan.

Reagan wrapped himself in Harry Truman's mantle he campaigned in Truman's hometown of Independence, visiting Truman's grave, library and his own Boss.

Reagan, joining auto workers for a dining machine lunch, portrayed himself as a friend he working man as he toured an auto plant in Detroit after he had conferred with executives of the United Auto Industry.

The Klan furor started Monday when Reagan told Carter he had begun his campaign in the "city of sin" and is the parent body of the Ku Klux Klan, in Tusculum, Ala.

Reagan, who spoke that day in Tusculum, said he met what Reagan said, and accused him of "waging a war of innuendoes" that seek to drive a wedge between the South and the rest of the nation.

In his defense, Reagan issued a statement late Sunday saying he meant no harm and charging that he was not an issue in this campaign.

Reagan said it was "a desperate and I believe futile attempt to divert attention from the real issue of this campaign, which is his sorry record. I don't intend to win this."

The walkway between the Helaman Halls housing complex and the Richards Building is expected to be completed within the month, said Paul Rasmussen, university construction engineer.

Work on a tunnel for the walkway closed 1230 North between Provo Canyon Road and the university loop road for about a month prior to the opening of school. The road was reopened last week, Rasmussen said.

Digging near the tunnel project, on the Richards Building baseball field, is to bring more utilities to that end of campus and is unrelated to the tunnel project, he said. The Tanner Building will be built near the tunnel project. The proposed building is now being designed.

Construction of the Harman Center, a two-building continuing education complex north of Deseret Towers is also under way. Digging to lay utility lines and for other work closed the parking lot west of the Morris Center, but it is scheduled to be reopened within the week, Rasmussen said.

The continuing education buildings are now in the structural construction phase. They are scheduled to be completed next fall.

Two separate projects are under way at the Wilkenson Center. A roof is being constructed over the east patio and an addition is being built to the food services area.

The large crane in front of the Wilkenson Center is helping to place beams for the ceiling over the patio between the ballroom and the Varsity Theater area. The new room is designed to help relieve some of the traffic from the step-down lounge.

Construction will be completed later this fall, said Al Nelson, assistant construction engineer.

An additional 25,000 square feet is being added to the Wilkenson Center cafeteria and food services area. The construction is expected to increase seating from the present 500 seats to 750 and double the size of the kitchen, serving and utility areas.

Construction has only slightly inconvenienced customers in the food area, but traffic behind the Wilkenson Center has been affected, said Wells Cloward of Food Services. According to Nelson, work will be completed next spring.

The 12-story Spencer W. Kimball tower is scheduled to be completed by early 1981. Work on the tower was slowed during the summer because of strikes by plumbers and painters.

The 176-foot office-classroom tower, the tallest building in Utah Valley, will house the College of Family, Home and Social Sciences and also the College of Nursing.

The finishing operation is now under way, Nelson said.

"Much work is left to be done on the interior of the tower, such as considerable mechanical, electrical and painting work," Rasmussen said.

Work is also under way at the Ellsworth Livestock Center, located at University Avenue and 2230 North. A meat processing laboratory and classroom facility designed to serve 1,000 animal science students.

MX missile still opposed

DENVER (AP) — An independent poll of residents in eight Western states shows spreading opposition to government plans to locate the MX nuclear missile system somewhere in the Rocky Mountain region.

The poll conducted for Rocky Mountain Poll shows that 58 percent of the proposed mobile missile system also has grown in the eight-state region during the past year. A total of 56 percent of those surveyed this year said that they were aware of the proposed missile system, while a year ago, only 41 percent said they were aware that there was such a proposal.

States surveyed included Nevada, Utah, Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming, Idaho and Montana.

Regionally, 51 percent of the 1,020 persons surveyed by Behavior Research Center of Arizona during July said that they opposed locating the missile system in their state, compared with 39 percent opposition noted following last year's poll. Rocky Mountain Poll said.

Y an easy favorite to win WAC football

By JOHN JACKSON
Universe Sports Editor

Soothsayers have divided the WAC into four divisions, with BYU in a class by itself.

The WAC Skywriters (media personnel who visited each team during a week-long tour of the WAC) agreed with other prognosticators when they voted the Cougars the near-unanimous favorite to win the WAC.

BYU received 21 of the 24 first-place votes and finished with 27 points, San Diego State, 64 points, edged Utah, 67 points, for second place. Votes were cast on a 1-2-3-4-5-6-7-8-9 basis with the lower numbers indicating the better team.

Utah and SDSU were joined by Hawaii, 94 points, in the second "division." Magazine predictions have also agreed the three schools are the best threats to upend the Cougars.

The Skywriters allotted Colorado State 126 points, Wyoming 154 and the University of New Mexico 180.

Rounding out the conference are two weak sisters, Texas-El Paso, 180 points, and Air Force, 210.

the Cougars "as strong in the middle as we've been in recent years."

The linebackers will be another strong point. Strong side L.B. Glen Redd finished just one vote from being first in the Skywriters balloting for the top defensive player in the WAC. The secondary returns three former starters.

Offensively, the Cougars return everything but Marc Wilson and most of the line. Eric Lane and Homer Jones both have experienced a year in the Cougar system after transferring from junior college. Wilson will be replaced by 1978's All-WAC quarterback, Jim McMahon. The top ten receivers are back.

Only Nick Eyr returns from the line that protected Wilson last year. "The problem here is more experienced depth than talent," Edwards said. "We think we have good talent."

media members from San Diego were on the Skywriters tour but the Aztecs were second in the prediction balloting anyway.

SDSU returns more than half (six members) of last year's starting offense and all but two from the starting defense. In addition, the Aztecs return more than half of both the defensive and offensive second teams. "This is probably the most experienced team we've had in my eight years here," Coach Claude Gilbert said.

SDSU's Mark Halda placed second only to Wilson among last year's passers, but this year he hasn't even tied down a starting berth. Gilbert believes SDSU has the finest collection of signal callers in the land. Matt Kopler was first team All-American last year for Mesa JC in San Diego. He has 10 JC records for total offense and touchdowns.

Concern that Kopler might be redshirted prevented the young quarterback from giving Jack Campbell (Utah) a run for the money when the Skywriters voted for the top newcomer to the league.

Gilbert said sophomore Rick Hansen is the best athlete of the three QBs and a strong showing has thrown him into the race for the starting job. Halda is a dropback passer and Kopler a rollout quarterback. Hansen mixes the two talents.

Running back Tony Allen was honorable mention American Associated Press, last year.

sive line in pounds: 260-255-260-260-275. And its good. "The second offensive line is better than any offensive line I've ever coached," said Coach Howard. Tackle Jack Campbell, who sat out last season after starting for USC, was the runaway selection of WAC Skywriters to be the league's top newcomer.

Defensively, the Utes have Jeff Griffin, the only active player named to an all-decade team by the Veterans Committee of the WAC Skywriters. "There is no question that Jeff Griffin is the best cornerback in the West and one of the best in the country," Coach Howard said.

This year marks the return from redshirt for Steve Fairchild. Like Kopler of SDSU, Fairchild was a JC All-American for Mesa JC in San Diego, where he set the all-time JC passing mark of more than 5,000 yards.

Predictably, the Rams plan to throw more this season.

No surprises planned by Y's passing team

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Don't look for any surprises this year from the nation's top college passing team, Brigham Young Coach LaVell Edwards' quarterbacks haven't averaged more than nine wins a season for four years by handing off to the fullback up the middle.

The faces may change at quarterback for the Cougars, but not the job to make life absolutely miserable for opposing defensive backs.

First there was Gary Sheide, then Gifford Nielsen, now backup to Ken Stabler at Houston. And last year there was All-American Marc Wilson, who set a raft of NCAA football career and season passing total offense records before signing with the Oakland Raiders.

This year's Cougar quarterback is junior Jim McMahon, hardly a nonentity. He was redshirted last season with knee surgery after being named the Western Athletic Conference's top quarterback and having beaten Wilson out of the job.

Can McMahon match Wilson? "I think he can," Edwards says. "I think they're quite similar in that they both run well. Jim may be just a little quicker, both have good delivery."

And McMahon's arm is stronger than either Wilson's or Nielsen's, Edwards said.

"We won't be changing anything there," Edwards said of the fearsome BYU passing attack, which carried the Cougars to an 11-0 record and a fourth straight shared or outright WAC title before Indiana upset BYU 38-37 in the Holiday Bowl.

Last year, the Wilson-led Cougars were the first NCAA Division I team ever to throw for more than 4,000 yards in a season, rolling up 521 yards a game in total offense and scoring more than 40 points a contest.

"I think we just have to feel good about our returning people, particularly at receiver and at running back and quarterback," said Edwards, who is 63-20-1 in eight seasons at BYU.

Wilson may be gone but his receivers aren't. BYU's top 10 pass-catchers from last year will be hauling in McMahon's offerings.

Indeed, Edwards feels good enough about his prospects to hold out the possibility of another undefeated regular season. "If we could get by San Diego State and Wisconsin, assuming you win the games at home and at Utah, then I think we'd have a real shot at it," he says.

Lane and Homer Jones made the most of their infrequent rushing opportunities, each carrying for more than 500 yards.

Starting tight end Clay Brown had 32 catches and was the nation's leading punter last year with a 45.3 average.

If there is doubt about BYU's offensive abilities, it's due largely to a new and untested offensive line. Only all-WAC tackle Nick Eyre, at 6-foot-5, 270 pounds, is considered a standout. But Edwards doesn't sound too worried. "I feel pretty good at this point, but we just have to kind of wait and see."

Edwards calls BYU's defense "our secret weapon," but it's no secret that a key to the Cougar's success in recent years has been their ability to manhandle opposing running backs.

Gone are all-Wac performers Matt Mendenhall at defensive end and Gary Kama at middle linebacker, but all-conference and Glen Titensor and linebacker Glen Redd are back. So is all-league cornerback Bill Schoepflin.

As for the WAC, Edwards says, "I think the league is a lot stronger this year," with BYU, Utah, San Diego State and Hawaii all capable of claiming the conference title and Colorado State in a dark horse role. A poll of WAC writers has BYU the overwhelming conference favorite as the Cougars prepare for their opener Saturday at New Mexico.

Edwards feels good enough about his prospects to hold out the possibility of another undefeated regular season. "If we could get by San Diego State and Wisconsin, assuming you win the games at home and at Utah, then I think we'd have a real shot at it," he says.

Sarth Baker, goalie for the Y soccer team punches the ball safely away from the Cougars' goal area during their 3-2 victory game with University of Alberta Monday. The Soccer Cats play another exhibition game against Alberta tonight at 8.

Big year expected

Soccer Cats defeat Alberta

They may be underdogs now, but the soccer team heading for the top.

Last year, they only placed fourth in the Rocky Mountain International Soccer League. But already this season they have beaten Colorado College, last year's winner of the Rocky Mountain International Soccer League. And Monday they defeated University of Alberta, the 1979 national collegiate champions.

The BYU kickers will meet the Canada team again tonight at 8 on the Haws Field near the Smith Edhouse.

Coach Jim Dusatra was elated over the 3-2 victory today. "Alberta has very good ballplayers," he said. "They will be even tougher for this second game."

The team will be traveling to California next week to play some top soccer teams, among them University of San Francisco, the national champions for four of the last six years.

"If we win some of our games on that road trip, we'll get national recognition," said Dusatra.

Dusatra describes his team as "very young," with only six returning varsity players and the rest being freshman or transfer students.

"We have no superstars on the team, just tremendous team spirit," he said.

However, the main strength of the team lies in the mid-field, Dusatra said. Heading that area is Robert Vogelsberg, a senior and captain of the team. Fernando Muniz, Ricky Jones, and James Polley add more depth.

Promising recruits include forward Victor Trujillo, an All-American transfer from Glendale College. Tom Munoz, a freshman from Loma Alta, Calif., will display his soccer skill as a defender.

Dusatra emphasized the importance of student support. "We hope more people will come to the games, because it really does help," he said.

Y netters lob into fall season

Three recruits and a strong returning team should keep the women's tennis team high in the national rankings.

Maria Rothschild, a two-year All-American, is the only player from the top six who will not be returning.

"We have almost all of the team back," said Coach Dan Valentine.

That's good to know, considering that the team is ranked second in the nation last season.

Debbie Robb, a freshman from Salt Lake City, could contribute much to the team. "She is very experienced, an outstanding tennis player," said Valentine.

Susan Pendo from Los Angeles and UCLA transfer sa Kernsey are also expected to bring some racket ill to the team.

Top returnees include sisters Linley and Tracy inner, Heather Ludloff, Charlene Murphy and an Wilcox, Ludloff, Murphy and Tracy Tanner e All-Americans.

"I feel good about the three additions to the present team. It will make a very, very strong team," said Valentine.

The team will be playing some conference matches this fall with Idaho State and Weber State. A tournament in Santa Barbara is also scheduled.

"We have been switching to a lighter fall schedule and a heavier spring schedule," she said.

Tryouts to be held for Y's rugby team

A meeting for all rugby players will be held Thursday at 4:30 p.m. at the Haws Field near the Smith Edhouse. All interested athletes may try out for the team then.

The rugby team will play between 20 and 25 matches during the season, traveling throughout the Western U.S. A possible trip to the British Isles in April is being planned.

University of California at Berkeley, the defending national champions, will be playing the Cougars here in Provo. Other matches are set with UCLA, and Arizona State.

"After a couple of matches we should be nationally ranked," said Jeff Ruffolo, information director for extracurricular sports.

Cougars ranked 10th in all-sports

A second-place finish in golf, plus strong showings in both football and basketball, helped boost BYU into the top 10 in the 1980 all-sports rankings.

According to a recent survey taken by the Knoxville Journal, the Cougars placed 10th in the nation in the final tabulation of all-sports contenders. University of Southern California won the title by the narrowest of margins, finishing one point ahead of UCLA.

The Trojans and Bruins have dominated the all-sports rankings since they were begun by the Journal in 1971. USC has claimed the title six times, and UCLA has finished first four times.

BYU's 1980 finish was the seventh time the Cougars have placed among the nation's top ten since the survey was started. Three of those times BYU placed in the top four.

A total of 19 of the Cougars' points this season came on the strength of the golf team's runner-up finish in the NCAA championships at Ohio State. Nine points came as a result of the track team's finish in the NCAA finals, eight came through football and seven in basketball.

The top 10 listing had USC in front with 82 points, followed by UCLA (81), Clemson (62 1/2), Texas (60 1/2), California (57), Oklahoma State (54), Florida State (53 1/2), Indiana (53 1/2), Oregon (43 1/2) and BYU (43). BYU is one of five schools to finish in the top 10 a total of seven times. The others are Tennessee, Oklahoma State, Arizona State, and Michigan. Oklahoma has made a top 10 showing six times, Texas five, and Indiana and Alabama four times each.

Road race scheduled for Saturday in Orem

Join Paul Cummings, Doug Padilla, and other champions in a four-mile road race to be held Saturday at 9 a.m. Registration for the race will be from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. at the south-west entrance to Gallery 28 of the University Mall in Orem. Entrance fee is $6, and will provide participants with a pair of nylon running shorts or an official T-shirt. The fee will be $3 without the shorts or T-shirt. Call 226-8406 for more information.

Y 'has a mission' claims Holland

By DONNA IKEGAMI
Asst. News Editor

BYU is a school with a mission, President Jeffrey R. Holland told BYU students and faculty at the devotional Tuesday.

"Here is a great secret which I now share with you," said Holland. "It isn't your former high school or some other university. It is a school with a mission, a mission it has been called to by prophets."

Holland also stressed the importance of discipline. He related a personal experience he had while studying in Seattle. He was teaching a full summer schedule in addition to taking a demanding class which "was not exactly ecstatic over." Just as a major mid-term paper was due, his parents visited him. He had not seen them for more than 8 months, but decided to finish his paper while his family toured the area. He completed the paper and was later released when the professor of the class recommended him to a faculty member at Yale, where he received his doctorate degree.

In the end he said he was thankful he took the time to complete the paper. "It has made a wonderful difference in my life to have demanded just a bit more of myself," he said.

He mentioned that through discipline, students can "stand out in the crowd through extra effort and personal commitment."

Although Holland encouraged students to abide the dress code, he also said there is more to education than being well groomed.

"You can wear the cleanest clothes in town and keep the best groomed hair in the class, but if you do not invest your heart and soul in this opportunity for an education, we have failed in our mission."

This devotional assembly was unlike previous ones. A media presentation introduced the new president to the student body. Slides showed the serious, as well as the humorous side of the new president. Although he has accomplished a great deal, Holland is humble about his many achievements. "I stand before you as a living symbol that anyone can make it through school, fill a mission and get a job," he said.

ASBYU President Jeff Duke spoke to the audience prior to Holland's address. He said learning can take place in and out of the classroom.

'The Right Stuff' is Good Stuff

By JOHN TAYLOR
Universe Asst. Photo Editor

Few college-age Americans have forgotten the patriotic mania and multi-billion dollar spending that accompanied the Apollo lunar-landing project of the late '60s. Few, however, are familiar with Apollo's forerunner, the Mercury space program. Most college students remember little about that time except that becoming an astronaut was somehow more prestigious than even becoming president, and since astronauts were square-jawed, clean-living Americans who always came from the slim ranks of America's Eagle Scouts, most of us aspired also to grow up into clean-living, square-jawed Eagle Scouts. The myth of the all-American astronaut is explored in Tom Wolfe's latest book, "The Right Stuff," in which he traces the Mercury program and the men who participated, from the program's conception in 1959 until its completion in 1963.

The explosion is not totally disillusioning, because Wolfe replaces the clean-cut all-American image created by "Life" magazine and the NASA administration with a more credible if less idealistically pleasing picture of the early astronauts. Without exception, NASA chose their astronauts from among the nation's bravest and most elite group of pilots: the test pilots of the armed forces. To these men the highest ideal was having "the right stuff," an indefinable quality which divided the world "into those who had it and those who did not." It was not simply bravery — any fool could throw his life away in the name of bravery; no, the idea of the right stuff was that "a man should have the ability to go up in a hurtling piece of machinery and put his hide on the line and then have the moxie, the reflexes, the experience, the coolness, to pull it back in the last yawning moment — and then to go up again the next day, and the next day, and every next day, even if the series should prove infinite," and in the process climb the pyramid of the military flying career, proving every foot of the way that indeed "you were one of the elected and anointed ones who had the right stuff" and could move higher and higher ... that you might be able to join ... the very Brotherhood of the Right Stuff itself."

And that was the crux of the problem, because part of having the right stuff meant that being a top pilot was simply not enough. The test pilots were the playboys of the armed forces, and prerequisite to being a true fighter jack included other things — for instance, proving oneself an ace driver, having a hot car, preferably a Corvette or some foreign job, and after hours following the standard procedure of "Flying and Drinking and Drinking and Driving." Wolfe states that more fighter pilots died in automobiles than in airplanes. There were those who arrived in the morning at the airfield not just hung over, but still drunk, "slapping oxygen cones over their faces and trying to burn the alcohol out of their systems, and then going up, remarking later: 'I don't advise it, you understand, but it can be done.' (Provided you have the right stuff...)"

Ironically, when asked to volunteer for NASA, the majority of these pilots felt little but contempt for the program, because it involved no flying: "the Mercury capsule was not a ship but a can. Not only did it involve no flying, there wasn't even a window to look out of." Fortunately for the program, the will of each man was the inescapable fear that overrode all other logical considerations: "I must not get ... left behind." Seven out of 56 volunteers were selected, and immediately they were looked upon in awe by the rest of America. Not only did the public totally overlook the fact that an astronaut was not so much a pilot as a guinea pig, but it was incredible that anyone would volunteer to go into space on top of an American rocket, which had a notorious record for being spectacularly unsuccessful; "They had many names, these rockets, Atlas, Navaho, Little Joe, Jupiter, but they all blew up." The test pilots at Edwards air base watched condescendingly when an ape was scheduled to make the first flight — try putting an ape at the controls of an X-15 and see what happens, they thought — "You would have a twenty-million-dollar hole in the ground and a pulverized ape ... it was a laugh and a half, the whole thing ... in Project Mercury an ape was fine! First-rate! In fact ... the ape was an astronaut! But incredibly, there was no similar reaction among the American public. In fact, people everywhere were saying, 'My God, do you mean there are men brave enough to try what the ape has just gone through?'"

In exploding the myth of the astronaut's all-American righteousness, Wolfe provides the explanation of how it occurred to begin with. The astronaut, sensing their impending stardom, sold the exclusive rights to their story to "Life" for $25,000 per year for each astronaut, and the contract included a clause which allowed the man to censor anything that was going to appear. "It was not so much that the men wanted to come out sounding like the Hardy Boys in Outer Space — it was just that you'd have to be an idiot to let your personal story actually get personal ... there was only one way to play it: with a salute stapled to your forehead." Thus there were no descriptions of "rivalries between the boys and such colorful matters as 'Driving & Drinking ... the hell with that.'" Not only their pictures, but also their life histories and attitudes appeared in "Life" completely retouched.

John Glenn put the icing on the image of goodness at the astronaut's first press conference. Glenn was one of the few who did not fit the image of right stuff. He drove an ancient Peugeot, a beat-up old junker, and he went home each weekend to see his wife. He read the Bible, he didn't swear, he grew up in midwestern Ohio, he didn't participate in the night's Drinking & Driving binge, he was an Eagle Scout, and — he was a politician through and through. Thus, at the first press conference, it was Glenn who spoke up in answer to the questions first, speaking of God & Family & Country — "painting some ... amazing picture of the Perfect Pilot wrapped up in a cocoon of Home & Hearth & God & Flag!" None of the others were about to set out to alter the picture, however, and the next morning the astronauts were national heroes. The myth was created that quickly.

The humanizing of America's old heroes is somewhat painless, however. Wolfe includes many humorous anecdotes which soften the disillusionment. For instance, the first man in space, Alan Shepard, was left in the space capsule for four hours before his launch due to technical problems. Since the flight was intended to last less than 20 minutes, no provisions had been made for normal bodily functions, and he was left sitting on top of the rocket with an incredible need to urinate and no way to relieve himself. He was finally told by ground control to urinate in his space suit, which short-circuited all the medical monitoring equipment hooked up to his body, but did not cancel the flight. In another instance, Gordon Cooper was lying in his capsule, just prior to launch, with millions of Americans and journalists asking, "What could he be thinking right now?" Ground control, watching the monitors, were amazed that "Gordo" had fallen asleep. Similar anecdotes are plentiful and make "The Right Stuff" entertaining reading.

Wolfe, as the founder of "The New Journalism," has not lost his touch over the years. He has done an amazing job of capturing the attitudes and feelings of America's pioneers in space. His prose is razor-sharp, and his ability to get inside the heads of his subjects and then put on paper their emotions is as uncanny as it was when he became one of Ken Kesey's Merry Pranksters to write "The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test." "The Right Stuff" is a book that anyone from sci-fi fanatic to urban housewife will enjoy immensely.

Cliff House opens

By KIM KAATMAN
Entertainment Editor

Looking for something different to do on a date? How does a ride up the world's steepest tram to a soft rock dance atop Bridal Veil Falls sound?

Sparks Entertainment, a traveling disco setup, is responding to a need by creating a weekly couples-only getaway. Every Friday night, couples can ride the Bridal Veil Falls tram to the Cliff House Lodge and enjoy a romantic evening dancing high above BYU.

Rich McEwan, a co-sponsor and BYU graduate student, said, "We looked around the Provo area and saw there was no place for couples to go and enjoy soft rock dancing. The Star Palace has disco, and The Rock has new wave — but no place specializes in soft, slow songs to dance to. We hope to have about three slow dances to each fast dance — rather than the opposite you find at the Star Palace or The Rock."

According to McEwan, Cliff House Lodge can hold about 100 couples so anyone planning on an evening up there should head for the falls early. The lodge will officially open for Friday night fun this week with what McEwan calls a "gala affair." Couples can ride the tram up to dizzying heights, dance, enjoy the view, and have some light refreshments, Friday at 8:30 p.m.

Like the Star Palace, Cliff House Lodge does have a dress code. McEwan said, "We want to keep a nice image — no jeans."

Teletelton proves profitable

LAS VEGAS (AP) — An "exhausted, but extremely happy" crew ended the 15th annual Jerry Lewis Labor Day Teletelton for Muscular Dystrophy about $1 million ahead of the $30 million goal.

Host Pettal, a Muscular Dystrophy Association spokesman, said additional pledges might come in, but the counting Monday closed at $31,103,787.

"It's the highest figure ever reached" in the fund raise, he said.

The 21-hour television marathon started Sunday at 9 p.m. EDT in a broadcast from the Sahara Hotel on the Las Vegas Strip.

Money raised in the telethon finances research and medical services for victims of muscular dystrophy and 39 other neuromuscular diseases. The association sponsors 10 university-based research centers and is backing about 750 individual research projects.

The figure cited as the collection total reflects only the amount pledged by telephone during the telethon broadcast, Pettal said. Last year, 97 percent of the pledges were redeemed, he said.

Live remote appearances "worked beautifully" from Atlantic City, N.J., with Frank Sinatra and Sammy Davis Jr.; from New York City with Liza Minnelli, Patty Duke Astin and John Astin; and from Los Angeles with Barry Manilow, he said. The system was used this year for the first time.

'Pink lady' splits up

TOKYO (AP) — The Pink Lady, a fast-stepping, short-skirted singing duo whose tunes have dominated the top of Japan's pop charts for the past few years, announced Monday that they would break up next spring to pursue individual singing and acting careers.

Keiko Masuda and Mitsuyo Nemoto, known to their fans as Kei and Mi, produced five million-selling records since debuting in August 1976.

But they have seen their popularity fade and their record sales go down this year in Japan, where record producers put a premium on turning up fresh, young faces.

Mi said she wants to continue singing after the breakup, while Kei said she wants to branch off into acting and other entertainment.

Actors' strike continues

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Contract talks between representatives of actors and the film and TV industry resumed Monday afternoon, following a 16-hour recess, as the strike became the longest one in the screen Actor's Guild's history. There was no indication of progress.

As the strike entered its 43rd day, no one would say whether the negotiations were any closer to a settlement. The strike began July 21.

The second longest SAG walkout was in 1960 during Ronald Reagan's second term as SAG president. Reagan is now the Republican candidate for president of the United States.

During that strike, the union sought compensation for use of movies on regular television, as compared with the present demand of compensation for use of feature films on pay television. SAG members also demanded a pension, health and welfare plan in the 1960 strike.

Producers settled that six-week strike by agreeing to pay television residuals beginning in 1960. They also paid a lump sum of $2.62 million to the pension, health and welfare fund.

In the current strike, actor's had asked for 6 percent of the producers' profits on videotapes and video cassettes after a $10,000 percent on pay-TV dramas, comedies and variety shows, and 2 percent on TV on talk and game shows after the programs had run for two years on pay TV or sold 100,000 cassettes or discs.

Cowboy scholarships created

NORMAN, OKLA. (AP) — Cowboy Willie Nelson staged a benefit concert for Indians over the weekend, and the country western star's songfest collected an estimated $40,000 for United National Indian Tribal Youth Inc.

UNITY spokesman J.R. Cook said the concert drew some 10,000 Nelson fans to Lloyd Noble Arena here Saturday night. The money will be used for Willie Nelson Music Scholarships for Indian students.

Some money also will be used for UNITY activities, Cook said. "Willie Nelson and his family performed for free," he said. "They even flew up here at their own expense."

Father and son work to restore fine instruments

By RANDALL WRIGHT
Universe Guest Writer

At one end of Elm Avenue in Provo a 1960s pickup truck, creaking and leaning under too much weight, lurches slowly into a driveway. Almost before it stops rolling, three young men are out and begin loosening the stout iron straps holding a 2,100-pound grand piano in place. The heavy instrument is lifted onto a dolly; then, as six arms wade the teetering load, it is maneuvered down a ramp and into the waiting garage.

Inside, as padding is carefully moved, Lynn H. Hansen Jr. surveys the ancient, peeling and much-mended seven-foot concert grand, ring the next six weeks he will come intimately familiar with its every curve and groove, repairing and building until it finally emerges not only as an excellent musical instrument but as a valuable piece of fine furniture.

Hansen, 25, is part of a small, family business operating from a garage workshop. In an age of plastic and mass production, he still works slowly and painstakingly by hand, putting his craftsmanship before speed.

His father, Lynn Hansen, a 45-year veteran of piano rebuilding, is a master craftsman of the Piano Technician's Guild. In 1973, after 15 years at BYU, the two Hansens came working partners in their own refinishing business.

Lynn Sr. repairs and regulates the inner workings of the instruments. He Lynn Jr. does the woodwork, finishing and rebuilding the cases. Combined, they have about 50 years experience working on pianos," said the younger Hansen.

At first, the Hansens worked mainly on pianos, but over the years they have refined other fine furniture as well. Their first job was a grand piano the Sears Theater wanted to use in an Orem LDS stake. They've had to scramble to keep up with demand ever since.

Hansen said all the pianos that come in need to have the action regulated. The action is the piano's inner mechanism that causes the hammer to strike the strings when a key is struck.

"The first thing I do is take the action out of the case," said Hansen. "It's easier to work on the action outside the piano. Dad works on the action while I do the cases."

"It's like taking your car in to have the engine completely rebuilt," he said. "But piano actions are more complicated in some ways than a car engine."

Hansen said he thinks people can get into trouble by trying to make do-it-yourself repairs that require a trained craftsman. "We do get called to fix other people's fixings sometimes," he said.

Grand pianos — ranging from baby-grand to concert grands — may weigh from 800 to 2,200 pounds. But though the instruments are heavy, they are also delicate. Moving a grand piano requires special techniques, equipment and plenty of muscle if damage is to be avoided.

Special dollies and ramps are used to jockey the pianos around corners, through foyers and into living rooms. "One we just delivered weighed more than a ton," Hansen said. The Hansens have a perfect record — they haven't dropped one yet.

Much of a piano's weight comes from the cast-iron plate over which the strings are stretched. A typical grand-piano plate weighs about 900 pounds and holds the combined tension of all the strings. "That works out to about 30,000 pounds of pressure when it's all tuned up, depending on the kind of piano," Hansen said.

"Occasionally, we have to repair cracks in the sound-board, which means you have to take the plate out," he said, adding that this first requires removal of all the strings. Plates are lifted out of the piano box with a 2,000-pound block-and-tackle hoist.

Hansen said neglect is probably the worst thing that happens to most pianos. "The biggest mistake people make is not having it tuned up twice a year. Or they set flower pots or vases with water or sharp objects like spiral binders on it," he said.

But some damage can occur without the owner realizing what is happening. Temperature changes in the Provo area are drastic — from 0 to 100 degrees through the year. Temperature here can fluctuate from 30 to 60 degrees during one day.

"That's just hard on pianos," Hansen said. "The result of these temperature changes can be cracking of the base bridge, a long, narrow wood block at one end of the strings."

"Another problem area with older pianos is when people bring them into this climate after being in a more humid climate," he said. "When the moisture dries out, the wood cracks so the piano won't stay in tune."

"After about six months, when the piano has completely dried out, it's a good idea to have oversize tuning pins installed."

Fall: outdoor entertainment time

By MARA CALLISTER Asst. Entertainment Editor

Until heavy snow hits Utah valley, less than an hour's drive can take restless students to lake and stream fishing, or a canyon golf course, small game hunting, cave exploration, a mountain train ride, or two scenic train rides, as well as plenty of hiking and camping trails.

Fishing spots and regulations

Fishing season runs through November 30. Rainbow trout as well as some white bass and brook are stocked throughout the Provo river, Utah lake, Strawberry reservoir and the streams running through Payson and the mountains. For $5, a non-resident can fish for one day or pay $15 for a five day license. Utah residents can pick up a 10-day license for $5.

The old fashioned Heber Creeper, a steam engine which stops at the Bridle Veil Falls in Provo Canyon, goes to Heber and affords hours of fun.

Good area golfing

While the greens on the Timpanogos Municipal Golf Course in Provo stay clear most of the year, golfers wanting to shoot on the Hobbie Creek Canyon course must try the course before snow falls. Autumn colors fire up Hobbie Creek canyon, making September and October the most beautiful time of year to visit.

After an easy eighteen holes, Hobbie Creek Canyon, just outside of Springville, also offers areas for a barbecue, a covered picnic spot, and space for playing football or volleyball. Farther up, hikers can find deer, and late blooming wild flowers still dot the road.

Art City Springville

If buying books at the first of the school year made the month's budget tight, students can tour the Springville art gallery free. The old stucco building houses a collection of painting and sculpture and is open Tuesdays through Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Hunting information

Small game hunting season begins Sept. 20, opening up all of Provo's surrounding canyons. Birds, coyote, fox, bobcat and other 'varmints' inhabit the area and non-resident students can buy a year round small-game license for $30. Utah residents pay only $8.

Although the annual deer harvest - an average of 106,000 - tempts big game hunters, the season doesn't begin until Oct. 18.

Spelunking

Until mid-October when the roads close, Mt. Timpanogos invites visitors into Timpanogos Cave where "A hidden river of limestone art" flows beneath the mountain several hundred feet above the floor of American Fork canyon.

While students see Mt. Timpanogos from almost any point in Utah valley, the cave hides high in the range, filled with intricate, colored formations.

It costs less than a Cougarat shake to visit the cave. For 50 cents anyone over 16 can tour the caves between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Mountain climbing and tramming

For those who are not afraid of heights, windy mountain crevices, or ascending Bridle Veil Falls at an approximate 60 degree angle, an aerial tram takes riders up to the head of the waterfall every five minutes. For $3 per person, students can stop on top of the falls, where there is room for dancing or just having a party.

The Heber Creeper also stops at Bridle Veil falls before climbing a three and a half hour trail through Utah's best Alpine country. The steam engine ride costs $7 a person, leaves at 1 p.m. and returns to the falls at 4:30 p.m. daily.

Sightseeing

What about the sunny days when the temperature stays about 75 degrees and a friend suggests roasted marshmallows, barbecued hamburgers and creme sodas in a secluded area? The I-15 freeway tributaries lead to the Alpine Loop, a road that winds through Provo Canyon past Bridle Veil Falls and Robert Redford's Sundance resort. It even covers the land where "Jeremiah Johnson" was filmed. Before the road gets too steep, the loop reaches Aspen Grove where autumn has just reached Mount Timpanogos, and from there descends to American Fork Canyon.

Camping Campsites equipped

Lamanite Generation to hold audition

Auditions for the "Lamanite Generation" performing group will be held today from 7 to 9 p.m. in room 126 of the Social Hall. The group needs singers, dancers and those who can play musical instruments.

The group also needs technicians to help with productions that will run this year.

Performers must come from Lamanite cultures and can emphasize either traditional or modern approaches in their performances. Technicians need not be Lamanite, but can be any qualified student.

WINTERTONAUDIO

takes you closer to the music you love

signet

Do you know that you can make a vast improvement in your record reproduction system without changing amplifier and/or speakers? Sometimes a small but significant item like a phono cartridge can open your ears to sounds unheard before on your records. The Signet cartridge handcrafted in the laboratory of Audio-Technica, can define for you not only the musical instrument itself and its harmonics but also its location in the orchestra or band.

These exceptional cartridges may be heard (and must be to be appreciated) at Winterton's Audio. Just ask to hear a Signet. We'll compare it to any other you like. We think you'll like the Signet better. Prices start at just $40. You'll be a little closer to live sound.

Bovine magnets 'attractive' for car owners nationwide

By JERRY PAINTER
Off-Campus News Editor

Historically, people have not been excited about magnets, even most cows could do without them. But hundreds of cow magnets are selling like hot cakes now throughout Utah County and the state, and are normally only handfuls are sold.

Some local feed stores that sell the magnets are saying cow magnets are hard to come by.

Rather than using them for their cows, people are attaching the magnets to the fuel line of their automobiles about three to six inches from the car's carburetor and claiming to gain an extra 3 to 10 miles per gallon of gasoline.

Normally, cow magnets are used to gather metal shavings such as nails and wire, in a cow's first stomach. Gathering the metal in the first stomach prevents damage to the rest of a cow's intestinal tract.

Local feed store operators say the four-inch magnets, about the size of an adult finger, are taped to the fuel line side-by-side. Some tape them together in reverse polarity. Theoretically, the magnetic fields pick up the gasoline molecules for better combustion and efficiency.

We sell about 50 a week where before we sold only about 10 a week, if even that many," an Interstate Farmers Association salesman said. "Some of the other stores in the state are selling even more, because of the demand caused by people putting them on their cars."

The salesman said the IFA warehouse in Draper, Utah services several state-wide stores, had sold out about a month and had a hard time stocking more magnets because of the demand.

"I'm dubious myself as to whether they work to improve gas mileage," said Howard Allen, a salesman for Brookfield Products, Inc., feed producers. "We're trying to get more right now. They're selling like crazy. We sold out four dozen in a few days and got two dozen more in and sold them in one day."

Allen said people even asked him for cow magnets while he was attending church. "Normally it's something 'you don't sell much of,'" he said.

Most of the feed stores contacted said a few of their customers came back in to report an increase in gas mileage. None of the feed stores reported any dissatisfied cow magnet buyers. Some of the store operators said they were using the magnets themselves, but didn't have any results yet.

"The rush came about three or four weeks ago," Allen said. "I haven't put 'em on myself. It sounds kind of fishy to me. But I may try it if more people come in here and say it works."

Whether they work or not, cow magnets continue to break sales records throughout the state.

Allen says Brookfield Products, Inc. has been getting about a dozen calls a day asking for cow magnets. Before the rush hit, cow magnets were rarely requested, he said.

"When they buy them they don't say what they are gonna use them for," said a sales clerk for Grobest Feed and Farm Center in Orem. "We've sold out of about 12 dozen cow magnets in the last two months and we can't get any more. The lag in restocking them is caused by the demand."

Some of the people sneak into the shop and quietly make inquiries as if it were a secret, said one feed store operator. It's almost considered unusual for feed stores to sell a cow magnet for its intended purpose, he said.

"I sold a pair to a guy the other day," said a small feed store operator. "He wanted the magnets for his cows. I couldn't believe it, it blew me away."

Western state governors to meet, discuss MX, Sagebrush Rebellion

ARK CITY, Utah — The governors of western states will meet here later this week to talk about energy development, the Sagebrush Rebellion and the deployment of the missile system in the West.

The states are members of the Western Governors' Policy Office, an organization formed in 1977 to help further their common interests. This year, the organization is chaired by Utah Gov. Scott Matheson. Member states include Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming and Utah.

One of the main interests of the organization is keeping the federal government from making too many decisions for the states, says Kent Briggs, an aide to Matheson.

Briggs says federalism — the relationship between Washington and the states — will be a recurring issue throughout the conference, which begins Wednesday and continues through Friday.

Briggs says the East is anxious to develop the West's energy resources, perhaps without paying enough to offset the social, environmental and economic dislocation that massive development will entail.

On the other hand, some westerners are anxious to develop mineral and energy resources which Washington and many environmentalists would just as soon keep untapped.

The governors are worried about federal encroachment on states' rights, says Briggs, citing as an example a proposal to limit the severance taxes western states could place on their coal.

Banyan delivery delayed, will include more events

Even though Banyan traditionally has been handed to students in the spring, this year, according to Banyan Office Manager Karza, delivery will not occur until the fall of 1981.

There are several reasons for the switch in many times," Miss Karza said. "Most importantly, a fall delivery allows for a more complete coverage of events in the report of the winter semester. For example, we can now include graduation and all sports will have concluded their seasons by our deadline."

Plans for the 1981 Banyan include added information in the classes section. Karza said that would be accompanied with features on student life in the section and by the use of student portraits.

Karza explained that from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15, student portraits will be taken free of charge in the BYU Photo Studio. After Oct. 15, students will have to pay the usual $2.00 fee for the service.

The 1980 Banyan received a first class rating from the National Critical Service of the Associated Collegiate Press, with marks of distinction in the areas of photography, display and coverage.

The 1980 staff will be headed by editor Lori Karza, a home economics major who has worked on Banyan staff for three years. Photo editor will be Greg D'Haenen and copy editor Greg Deem. Business manager will be Joel Erickson.

- * Spelled out register receipt tape.

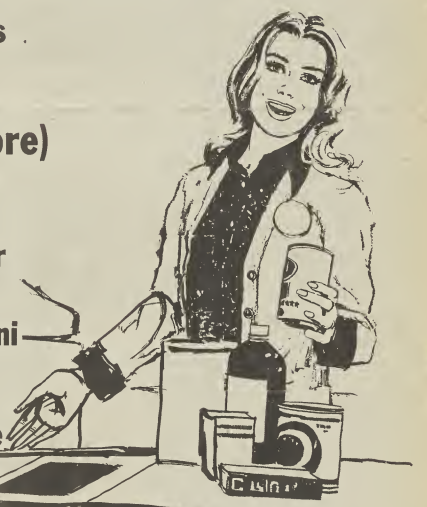

How does it work?

The UPC (Universal Product Code) symbol is a "picture" that our computer scanner can read. The cashier simply passes items over the scanner and a beam from the scanner "reads" the UPC code. Instantly, the name of the product and the price is spelled out on your register receipt tape . . . and appears in the customer viewing screen.

What if the price is "2 for 45¢"?
Let's say this example is sweet peas. The first can will be itemized at 23¢ and the second will be 22¢, for a total of 45¢ for the two. The computer keeps track of the fact that you bought one of the item, so even if the second item is at the end of the order, it "remembers" and the second item purchased reflects the discount.

Efficiency and accuracy . . . two great benefits to you from BOBCO'S, plus . . . the Big advantage of a "spelled out" register receipt tape!

Children from the Case, Crosby, Durrant and Wahliquist families play volleyball at a reunion held over the weekend. Their parents met when they were students at the Y. All of their mothers were roommates and so were all of their fathers.

Ex-roommates gather for reunion

By DONNA IKEGAMI
Assistant News Editor

Going back to school this fall means hitting the books once more, but attending the Y could also lead to romance.

The Daily Universe covered an unusual feature 23 years ago about four women roommates from the same mission and four men roommates who met at BYU and got married in the summer of 1956.

The four families, the Glenn Cases, Earl Crosbys, Ron Durrants and Wayne Wahliquists got together for their 24th reunion, last week. The reunion took place at the Crosby's West Jordan home to celebrate their 24th anniversary. The four families met on Aug. 30 for a buffet lunch. While some of the group members played volleyball in the backyard, the others reminisced, chatted and looked at pictures together in the comfortable living room.

According to Mrs. Case, the four wives, all return missionaries from the Canadian Mission, roomed together in a Provo apartment in the late '50s. Wayne Wahliquist served on the same mission and started to date Elsie, one of the girls. Pretty soon, three of his roommates met the rest of Elsie's roommates. They also started to date and soon fell in love.

Within one year, all four couples married in LDS temples. And after one year of marriage, all four couples had a child.

After the four husbands completed their education at BYU, the families moved to different areas. The Cases moved to San Leandro, Ca., the Crosbys live in West Jordan, the Durrants moved to Bellflower, Ca., and the Wahliquists now live in Ogden. All four families are active in the LDS Church. Most of them hold responsible positions in their wards and stakes, said Mrs. Case. The four couples have a total of 23 children and four grandchildren (at last count), Mrs. Case said. The Wahliquists said that they also have two adopted Indian children.

In the summer of 1971, the four families met for their 15th reunion in St. George, Utah. They plan to meet again to exchange experiences and memories.

Two sons are currently serving missions; two daughters attended BYU and continued the tradition by getting married. There are three children now attending BYU. Marlene Case, a freshman majoring in art and design, said that the get-together was very much like a family reunion. Her sister Kathleen Case, a sophomore, said, "It's fun to see everyone again."

Ron Durrant, a junior, found out that The Daily Universe wrote a feature about the families. He said that he was excited when he found the clipping with pictures of his family and friends at BYU.

Heavy rain washes Mount St. Helens

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Steady weekend rains washing down the flanks of Mount St. Helens bloated the Toutle and Cowlitz rivers and prompted the National Weather Service to issue a short-lived flood warning Tuesday.

Officials have expressed fears that serious flooding may take place near the volcano once the rainy season begins in earnest and have launched a massive dredging effort to clear the rivers of volcanic debris.

The weather service said the Cowlitz River at Castle Rock crested near flood stage of 23 feet Tuesday and at 9 a.m. had dropped to near 21.5 feet.

Only a few showers continued in the Mount St. Helens area during the morning. Slowly improving conditions were forecast, with no additional problems expected, the weather service said about mid-morning in lifting the warning.

Earlier, the service had issued the flood warning for the Toutle and Cowlitz from the mouth of the Toutle to five miles downstream from Castle Rock. The Toutle flows into the Cowlitz just north of Castle Rock.

Joyce Routson, public information officer for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said the U.S. Corps of Engineers reported only minor damage as a result of the rains.

The corps reported a Weyerhaeuser logging bridge washed out at the town of Toutle. The bridge also had washed out last Wednesday when a debris dam breached and sent a wall of water down the Toutle that also caused some minor flooding.

The corps reported water running over the road at some culverts and some construction access roads covered with water.

But work crews were back in the area and there were no problems with the containment dam under construction by the corps, Ms. Routson said.

"We don't expect to have the work set back, as far as I can determine," she said.

Carter attacks Reagan arms stand, compares himself to Harry Truman

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — President Carter accused Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan on Tuesday of calling for "a massive nuclear arms race against the Soviet Union" that would constitute "one of the most serious threats to the safety and the security and the peace of our nation and the world that is being dramatized in this 1980 election."

On the second day of his general election campaign, Carter came to the hometown of former Democratic President Harry Truman, one of his heroes and the only president ever to order the use of atomic weapons. Carter sought to separate Reagan not only from Carter's views but from those of all recent presidents of both parties.

"This year will be the sharpest difference in the voters' choice that I remember in my lifetime that the Americans have had to make," Carter said. "Reagan is different from me in almost every basic element of commitment and experience and promise to the American people."

Sharply different "And the Republican Party now is sharply different from what the Democratic Party is, and I might add parenthetically that the Republican Party now is sharply different under Reagan from what it was under Gerald Ford and presidents all the way back to (Dwight) Eisenhower."

"I believe in peace; I believe in arms control; I believe in controlling nuclear weapons; I believe in the rights of working people in this country; I believe in looking forward and not backward. I don't believe the nation ought to be divided one region from another. In all these respects, Governor Reagan is different from me."

Responding to the questions of pre-selected members of the audience at a "town hall meeting" in the Truman High School here, Carter seized the opportunity of a question about defense spending to attack Reagan's position on nuclear arms control.

Truman legacy

Carter sought to wrap himself in the Truman legacy with a drive down Truman Road, a brief visit with Truman's 95-year-old widow, Bess, a speech at the high school named for the Trumans, a short tour of the Truman Library and repeated references to the late president.

Carter also used Truman's blunt-spoken style in rebuking Reagan for his suggestion Monday that Carter had opened his campaign "in the city that gave birth to and is the parent body of the Ku Klux Klan."

Carter attended a Labor Day rally in Tuscumbia, Ala., headquarters of a Klan organization.

As he stepped from the ramp of Air Force One at Kansas City Municipal Airport before driving to Independence, Carter was asked for comment on Reagan's remark.

"I resent very deeply what Ronald Reagan said about the South about Alabama about Tuscumbia when he pointed out erroneously that opened my campaign the home of the Ku Klux Klan," he said.

"Anybody who resorts to slurs and to innuendo against a whole region of the country based on a false statement, a false premise, is not doing South or our nation good service."

DON'T LET MONEY DICTATE YOUR FUTURE

Whether you go to college no longer has to be based on how much money you earned during the summer.

Air Force ROTC offers a four, three or two-year scholarship to pay you $100 a month and all tuition, textbook and lab fees. With money problems reduced, the decision to go to college is your own.

The Air Force needs dedicated officers in a variety of different jobs, and one of these jobs is bound to fit into your picture. After graduation and commissioning, you'll find challenging work along with the change to grow through experience.

Find out about the Air Force ROTC scholarship program today. It's a great way to help yourself through those tough college years and a great way to get ready for an exciting future, as a commissioned officer in the United States Air Force.

Curb auto imports, says Reagan

DETROIT (AP) — Ronald Reagan stood by an automobile assembly line Tuesday and said the government should convince Japan to slow "that deluge of their cars into the United States."

Otherwise, he said, import competition could give rise to a new wave of protectionism in the United States.

With his call for federal pressure to curb auto imports, an endorsement of U.S. loan guarantees for Chrysler Corp., and a renunciation of an earlier suggestion of applying anti-trust laws to labor unions, the Republican candidate pressed his quest for blue-collar votes in Democratic Detroit.

Reagan conferred separately with leading officials of the big three auto makers, then toured the plant at which Chrysler is producing its new front-wheel-drive "K-car," the fuel-efficient model that is supposed to help revive that firm.

Amid the clatter of the assembly plant, he told about 200 workers that the Democratic administration has been scolding Detroit "for building the wrong kinds of cars," but that auto workers don't need lectures, they need jobs.

"You are building the right products for American buyers," Reagan said. "And you are ready to take on the Japanese in fuel economy, in quality, and in pride of workmanship."

The GOP presidential nominee said President Carter has told Detroit his administration will ease federal regulation of the auto industry "by tinkering with a few environmental test procedures."

"I can promise you my administration won't do just a little tinkering," Reagan said. "I'd like to get rid of several thousand of what I think are unnecessary regulations."

That drew applause, but Reagan also heard some jeers and catcalls as he toured the factory.

Reagan also drew criticism from Carter for a remark he made the day before about the president speaking in a city associated with the Ku Klux Klan. Carter had criticized the Klan in the speech and said Tuesday: "Anybody who resorts to slurs and innuendoes against a whole region ... based on a false statement, a false premise, is not doing the South or our nation a good service."

Reagan was not available to comment after the Carter statement.

The Republican candidate told the auto workers that he wants to "get the heavy hand of government off the backs of American industry," then added:

"There is something that government has a responsibility it has shirked so far, and that is to convince the Japanese that in one way or another for their own best interests that the deluge of their cars into the United States must be slowed while our industry gets back on its feet."

Intermountain Gas cost reduced, savings passed on to consumers

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) — Because Intermountain Gas Co.'s cost of buying natural gas has dropped, the Boise-based utility has asked the Idaho Public Utilities Commission for permission to drop its rates to customers.

cut to small commercial customers, says Ralph Haas, Idaho Falls division manager.

The proposed reduction reflects a similar reduction by Intermountain.

main's supplier, Northwest Pipeline Corp., he said.

Intermountain plans to put the reduction in effect Oct. 1 if the PUC approves.

Syria, Libya plan unity, critics question results

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria agreed Tuesday to yet another experiment with Arab unity — this time with the oil-rich North African nation of Libya. Some diplomats questioned the practicality of such a merger.

Syrian President Hafez Assad said the result of such a move would be the consolidation of Arab defenses against Israel.

He messaged his approval of the unity plans to Libyan leader Col. Muammar Khadafy, who proposed the idea in a speech Monday marking the 11th anniversary of the military coup that toppled the monarchy and propelled him to power. Sources said Khadafy would come here soon to firm up the merger blueprints.

"The Syrian people and myself were deeply moved by your unity appeal," Assad told Khadafy in a message broadcast by the state-run radio. "This unity appeal has struck an immediate favorable response amongst us."

Damascus is the birthplace of the Arab Socialist Baath Party which originated the Arab unity philosophy in the 1940s. Syria has led three unsuccessful unity experiments: with Egypt in 1958, Libya in 1971 and Iraq in 1978.

When Assad tried to unite his Mediterranean country with oil-rich Iraq, the attempt collapsed amid rivalries between the two wings of the Baath party that rule the neighboring Arab nations.

At least three other attempts at Arab unity in the last 25 years have ended in failure because of painful rivalries within the Arab fold.

Diplomats expressed skepticism about the Libyan-Syrian merger plan and said it would be premature to comment before the results of the Assad-Khadafy talks were known. Sources said the two leaders discussed the plan in a phone call Sunday night.

Previous unity experiments have so dismayed Arabs that newspaper columnists have said "trying to unite the Arabs is like nailing jelly to a wall."

Arab affairs experts, who criticized the Egyptian-Syrian unity effort from 1958-61, voiced the same criticisms about the planned merger between Libya and Syria.

Management School grant

BYU's School of Management has received $10,000 from Mrs. Norma R. Earl and children to establish the Frank J. Earl Memorial Scholarship said Donald T. Nelson, director of the LDS Development Office.

A local businessman, Earl was a distributor for Standard Oil and was involved in property management. During his 50 years in Provo, he served as president of the Provo Chamber of Commerce, president of the Provo Rotary Club, district governor of Rotary International, board member of the Provo Senior Citizens Organization, and president of the Provo Senior Citizens Organization.

Recipients of the scholarship will be chosen on the basis of financial need, a desire to make a career in a business-related field, and a minimum GPA of 3.0, Dyer said.

At-A-Glance

Talk on Law and Lawyers

A lecture by Dr. Frits W. Hondius, head of Public Law Division Council of Europe in Strasbourg, France, will be presented by the J. Reuben Clark Law School Thursday at 10 a.m. in 205 JRCB.

"Scientific Research and the Law" will be the title of the lecture given by Hondius, who holds a doctor's degree from Leiden University.

Hondius will examine the role of the law and lawyers in Western Europe in solving the problems posed to modern society by scientific research.

College poetry contest

A national college poetry contest, offering $200 in cash and book prizes, is being sponsored by the American Collegiate Poets.

Any student may submit his original, unpublished verse. All material must be postmarked no later than Oct. 31. Entries should be sent to International Publications, P.O. Box 44927, Los Angeles, Calif., 90044.

An initial $1 registration fee for the first entry and a fee of 50 cents for each additional poem is required.

Each poem must be on a separate sheet, typed, double-spaced and on one side of the page only. All entries must have the name and address of the student as well as the college attended in the upper left hand corner and each entry must have a title.

Entrants should keep a copy of all entries as they cannot be returned.

Besides cash prizes, all accepted manuscripts will be printed in the American Collegiate Poets Anthology.

BACK TO SCHOOL SHOPPING? AT THE BOOKSTORE ?

SURE!

The Notions Section always has the item you need at the last minute!

LOOK FOR THE SIGNS IN THE SCHOOL SUPPLIES AREA! You'll find BYU notebooks, 6 & 8 pocket notebooks, steno books, single subject notebooks, add a pockets, engineering pads, 4 column accounting pads, academic year planners, index dividers, 200, 300 & 500 count filler paper, TI Business Analyst II Hewlett Packard 41c Calculators, Bic Pens 5^c pencils and lots more.

The Coed Shop is featuring blow dryers, curling irons, and other indispensables. They carry leotards, tights, gorgeous clothes, even nurse's caps!

Tapes, albums, clocks, recorders, stereos, small appliances, sheet music—the Music Shop has it all! See the new cassette copier while you're there!

A little homesick? The Gift Shop has posters to make your place a home and stationary for writing home!

There's always something interesting in the General Book department!

If I had a choice I'd wear a T shirt every day of the week, and the Sport Shop has zillions of them (lots of other things too!)

Artists can find everything they need in the Art Dept ! (Once they find it on the first floor)

With so much competition, you have to look your best all the time. To do that, visit the Men's Shop!

The Photo Shop not only has cameras and watches, but darkroom supplies too!

The Sweet Stop can satisfy the pickiest sweet tooth!

WHERE?

Alright! I don't have to buy a guitar, calculator, skis, or a lot of other things. I'll just rent it at the Rental Shop, down by the Sports Shop
